Building Futures Since 1824
A CONTRIBUTOR TO THE ECONOMY ...

Low employee and student-income to the Central New York region, Cazenovia College contributes an estimated $15.1 million to the New York State economy. Of this amount, $14.3 million (or 95%) is spent locally, supporting local businesses and the local economy. An additional $800,000 is generated through student spending on textbooks, food, transportation, and other items. This direct spending generates additional income for the local economy, creating a multiplier effect that creates jobs and additional spending in the region. In total, the college’s economic impact on the local economy is estimated at $20.1 million, with $18.9 million generated directly and $1.2 million generated through multiplier effects.

In addition to its direct economic impact, Cazenovia College contributes to the regional economy through indirect effects. The college’s employees and students contribute to the local economy through their spending on goods and services, creating additional income for local businesses. This spending generates additional income for local businesses, creating a multiplier effect that creates jobs and additional spending in the region. In total, the college’s indirect economic impact on the local economy is estimated at $10.1 million, with $9.5 million generated through multiplier effects.

The college’s total economic impact on the local economy is estimated at $30.2 million, with $28.4 million generated directly and $1.8 million generated through multiplier effects. This economic impact is supported by the college’s commitment to providing high-quality education and student services, as well as its support of local businesses and the local economy.
